MORE OF EVERYTHING

This is the month when departments of the federal government report to the chief executive on the state of things as they see it. The first report this year is the navy's. The navy almost was the early bird last year, but the war department went home with the publicity worm.

It's hardly necessary to comment that these annual histories of bureaucratic operation are probably the world's most arid reading. They seem to have three obvious purposes: To prove that a certain department existed and did something, to show where the money went and to show why more money is needed. Some day a bureaucrat may announce his department has too much money to spend, but it's not likely.

Navy Secretary Swanson will not be the one to do it. His report points out that the year ending June 30, 1934, "has been made notable by the adoption of a definite policy to build up our navy." Mr. Swanson can be thankful for the good sailor who lives in the White House as he points out politely his department's need for more of everything.

Among the extra supplies and equipment needed, it is interesting to note, is manpower. "Very satisfactory progress" has been made in the multiplication of ships. But ships are valueless "unless manned by adequate crews of trained and experienced officers and men." At present the shortage of both . . . threatens the high state of efficiency which our fleet has attained."

An elusive thing is adequate defense. The dog chases his tail, and the tail runs away from the dog. Now the navy needs more manpower. Yesterday, today and tomorrow it has wanted, wants and will want more ships. There is always the condition of world affairs which makes a larger navy necessary. "It is gratifying," says Secretary Swanson, "to see the navy being restored to a position commensurate with its responsibilities in the defense of the nation." But will the job ever be done, Mr. Secretary?

EARTH'S CYCLOPIC EYE

Again it is tempting to predict that a currently unimportant event may prove to be one of the milestones of history when enough history has been written. The casting of a 200-inch telescope lens does not compare at the moment, perhaps, with an assassination in Russia, the political theories of an Idaho senator, the spread of the sales tax or an airplane flight. But it is a thing which probably will be remembered long after all the others have been forgotten.

The lens, which will increase by 27 times the volume of space into which man can peer from earth, is the product of many years of hoping and planning. Another lens of similar dimensions was poured last March. It was thought to be a failure, but the Corning Glass Works, which undertaken both projects, reports it has been repaired. A few years ago only a few brave souls believed one 200-inch telescope could be made. Now there are two lenses in existence.

It is folly to try to set down on paper descriptions of the distances to which man can see with this fearsome product of his mastery over material. One of the simplest gauges of its importance to astronomy seems to be the fact it will enable men to see 2,000,000,000 nebulae, each of which is a stellar body of from 10 to 100,000,000 stars, millions of them greater than the sun by thousands of times. It is as though the earth had been provided with a Cycloptic eye, to see its neighbors who, alas, probably aren't able to look back.

O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

NEW YORK, Dec. 5—Cabaret cuties of the Broadway floor shows these days are not even pale carbons of the wicked hussies of another decade. Then they were hard bitten, of indeterminate age and voices that husked of gin. Tin Pan Alley lyricized them as dangerous flames in the White Way blaze.

They figured in the Dot King type of murders, caroused with beady-eyed yogis of the flesh and the current Jack of Diamonds. Today cabaret girls are surprisingly young, vibrant and naive. Incongruities that do not blend with the astonishingly sparing display of costume.

Impresarios of big restaurants realize the cash till advantage of featuring velvety innocence. The lure of chastity adds zest to the chase and brings out the old rams along with young bucks. Few girls drink or smoke. Their conversation has a halting monosyllabic hobbie. But they feast the eye.

College boys amuse the gals and may take them to the Biltmore teas, the collegiates round-up spot. But they do not go in for pent house goings-on, for fear of losing their jobs. Of course, the environment is dangerous, but never have they been so closely guarded.

A wealthy bachelor in Beekman place has a standing order with his bookseller for every modern novel. Sounds extravagant, yet a publisher tells me it totals not more than $3,000 a year—not as much as dues to some of the exclusive clubs. The buyer reads about two out of ten and the rest go to hospitals.

Theodore Dreiser, recently changing publishers, is hibernating for the winter at his wind swept Mt. Kisco estate, "Iroki." And turning out one of his realistic tomes. In throes of creation he is up at daybreak for a tramp through the hills with his white Russian wolfhound and works steadily until mid-afternoon. Sometimes the next day he will tear up all he has written and begin over.

Among confirmed first nighters—outside the critical Death Watch—are Robert Rubin and Adolph Zukor of the movies; the Jules Bruloteurs, Sam H. Harris, Herbert Bayard Swope, Nathan Burkman, Leo Newman, Dr. Nat Lieb and Arnold Reuben. Then there is the blonde lady, Mrs. Katzmyer. I believe, who, richly ermine, never fails to be in Al on the right aisle at every premiere. It's ancient tradition that critics never applaud, and until recent years seldom laughed. But Robert Benchley broke up that with guffaws that almost stopped the show.

Dapper Dan Collins was last of the nattily dressed crooks who specialized in tasty togs. He was the most expensively garmented libertine of his time. The Gondorf brothers, with mustaches of crisp white were also surrounded with aplomb. There were also Flash Dan Kahn, Duke Kerrigan, Peaches Straub and Dan Ed—all noted for stylish turnouts. But clothes singled them out too much for comfort. Crooks now dress sedately save when they go to Europe and cut loose.

Charles Winninger is likely the most agile performer for his years on the American stage. He began his career with back yard pin shows in native Wisconsin and for years the Winninger Brothers were an acrobatic comedy act with wagon circuses. He is now, as Time would say, fiftyish with snow-white hair but the apple cheeks of a bumpkin. And he can do a flip-up as nimble as an acrobat of 20. He eats what he likes, takes a drink when he wants but walks miles daily and sleeps eight hours.

The Division Street gown shops, a three-block blinding glitter under the L's roaring blackness, has come to life again. For months many were shuttered, several in a row and the rest hung by thin thread. But now with minor exceptions all are busy funnels of light. On Division the chorus and chiffon ladies get the latest uptown style 48 hours later at one-third price. Division is opened all day Sundays and until 10 p.m. The first customer in the morning can get anything at any price—so strong is the superstition hoo-doo of first sale fizzles.

When Ed Kirby, Nashville insurance man passes the Hotel Vanderbilt, he winces. He stopped there during his university days. One morning he complained bitterly about the yowling noise across the court. "It's Mr. Caruso singing," said the clerk. And Kirby replied with a weak "O!" and sat there immobile for about 10 minutes.

THE STARS SAY

For Thursday, December 5

A day of opportunity, advancement, enhanced popularity and friendship with those in places of importance and power, is the augury based on the leading planetary operations. It is a time for seeking the preferments and favors of superiors and those who may give substantial aid to cherished desires and ambitions, although it may be well to have an eye to some subtle enmity or treachery, particularly in transactions with strangers. Be wise in change, but cultivate those who may enhance the prestige and promote cherished goals.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year of great opportunity for advancing the position and popularity, increasing the fortunes and promoting the attainment of high goals and cherished ambitions. In business and also personal contacts such opportunities should be sought and cultivated, but be alert to duplicity and some subtle enmities.

A child born on this day should be efficient, with an abundance of endowments to attain high favoritism with those in power and to thereby have its advanced personal and business ambitions fulfilled.

Notable nativity: William S. Hart, screen actor.

Pneumonia Germs Menace When Resistance Is Low

Recently I told you about influenza. I warned of the serious complications that often follow neglect of this disease. Today I want to tell you about pneumonia, one of those dreaded complications.

Physicians appreciate the dangers of pneumonia. It is often referred to as the "Captain of the Men of Death." Yet there are lay people who do not realize the seriousness of the disease.

Merely because they know of many recoveries of pneumonia, is no reason for them to believe it is not dangerous.

The germ responsible for this disease is called the "pneumococcus." It is found in four different strains which vary in their reactions on the human body. Each germ produces its own form of attack. Pneumonia is now classified as being of "type one," or "two," "three" or "four" as the case may be. The difference in type accounts for the variation in the severity of the disease.

Germs Always Present

Strange as it may seem, the pneumococcus germ is always with us, yet not all of us contract pneumonia. The germs strike when the resistance is lowered as result of cold, fatigue, undernourishment or overexposure to the germs. Then the body is unable to ward off infection.

The germs reach the lungs through the nasal passages and there set up a severe inflammation. A small portion of the lung may be involved. If both lungs are involved, the case may be. The difference in type accounts for the variation in the severity of the disease.

Neglect is dangerous for unless the patient is given excellent nursing and medical care the disease may soon prove fatal. It is especially dangerous when it afflicts the very young and the aged.

The treatment of pneumonia is constantly undergoing changes and improvements. Every effort has been made to discover a cure or prevention for this disease. It is probable that at some future date a more satisfactory method of treatment will be available. Perhaps this will be in the form of a special vaccine that will neutralize the poisons produced by the pneumococcus germ.

The use of oxygen gas has proven of great value. The oxygen helps the patient breathe more easily, diminishes fatigue and exhaustion, and lessens the strain placed upon the heart. It is always advisable for a sufferer from pneumonia to receive treatment in a hospital.

For a sufferer from pneumonia to receive treatment in a hospital where he may benefit by having the oxygen and other facilities when this is not possible, every effort should be made to provide quiet and pleasant surroundings.

Good nursing and constant medical supervision are imperative in the relief and cure of pneumonia.

Is This Too Good for Your Cough?

Creamulsion may be a better help than you need. It combines seven helps in one. It is made for quick relief, for safety.

Mild coughs often yield to lesser helps. No one can tell. No one knows which factor will do most for any certain cough. So careful people, more and more, are using Creamulsion for any cough that starts.

The cost is a little more than a simple help. But your druggist is authorized to guarantee it, so it costs nothing if it fails to bring you quick relief. Coughs are dangerous signals. For safety's sake, deal with them in the best way known.

A Review of the Day's News

By Arthur Brisbane

WILL THOSE inclined to underestimate the importance of airplanes in the next war be good enough to read a few headlines that stretch in big type across the front page of the British newspaper, "The Sunday Referee"?

"Bombing Tests Alarm Naval Experts."

"Biggest Warships Prove to Be at Mercy of Air Attackers."

"Hits From a Height of 10,000 Feet."

THE BRITISH newspaper goes on to say:

The Sunday Referee understands the admiralty is seriously concerned with the results of recent bombing experiments from the air.

"Up till fairly recently it has been maintained by the die-hard admiralty officials that a ship could not be attacked by airplanes with any hope of accuracy from 10,000 feet."

Their arguments were two-fold:

(1) That the moving target could be struck by accident, and (2) that at less than 10,000 feet the battleship could defend itself.

"Although the full facts are known to many, their publication is not considered to be in the public interest."

The Sunday Referee, however, feels that it is of urgent public interest to state that the bombing experiments have created an entirely new situation in official admiralty circles.

In fact, so acute is that situation that the experts are now asking whether the day of the navy as England's main defense is not practically at an end.

"The Sunday Referee, however, feels that it is of urgent public interest to state that the bombing experiments have created an entirely new situation in official admiralty circles."

SYNOPSIS
By Owen, ambitious Day-beach girl, is starred in a community Players amateur. Earl Harrow, New York real producer, sees her, thinks she has stage possibility. Kay explains that financial reverses prevent her studying art seriously. Kay offers to be a secretarial agent during his stay in Florida. One night, he entertains her and her friends on his boat, Commander III. Ida, a girl, Daytona Beach, who dabbles in the Play- performances, makes a fan for Harrow and wins his heart. Later she invites him to her home, but does not ask Kay. "Spike" is Harrow's press agent body-guard, invites Kay as partner, knowing it will be Ida. Kay accepts. Ida Harrow leaves the party to go to the beach. They return at four in the morning with the old story of running out of gas. Kay takes Ida aside and tells her she must get Harrow out of town before the big man gets too involved. Kay, however, has no objection to Kay becoming interested in himself. Kay's mother and father warn her against Harrow, so she decides to do as she wishes and not accept his new offer. Pete Ryan, a handsome life-guard, had been jealous of Kay, but he is over that now. Pete proposes, but Kay, again, thinks she loves him, so she waits. After Kay leaves, Harrow of her decision, is taken ill, so she decides to accept the producer's offer.

CHAPTER XI

Now all stage ambition and the rest are aside—here's the real life. If I work hard, please Mr. Harrow, he may be able to keep me as a secretary or something. I'll put it up to him that I need to keep earning money, that I like working for and that the stage business is not. And that will be the best for him. If he really does think such good possibilities for the stage, he can help me along, and if he does a part in a play our worries won't mean so much. Because theatrical salaries are pretty big in comparison to the average girl could earn in Salem, or in the city either. Tell me what you think."

At last back and looked again at her mother. Mrs. Owen was biting at her under lip, her eyes were caught.

"Kay," she said, and she spoke again for a few moments, then Kay said, "Well,

Mrs. Owen was struggling to hold back her voice, when she said, "Kay, no, all the more reason why I shouldn't want to see anything to do with that Mother." Kay reasoned. "Don't you see? What harm there be? And look at the terrible amount of good it would do if I got a permanent job with just anything. He's a man Mother."

I say, all the more reason. Kay, I'd never forgive myself if I went out at a time like this and expose yourself to someone you might be sorry for the rest of your life. Even a few days wouldn't have been so bad. It was only a sort of lark, wanting to do the typing for the slim chance you might chance to be an actress. But it's different. If I should let you do that work and you went and got into any trouble, I'd give myself and it would crush poor Bud to know. Responsible, the poor boy, would I. No, Kay, it isn't. It would be just a drop in the bucket and it isn't worth it."

I saw that further argument useless. She rode on, quiet, to think the matter through without upsetting her mother any more than she could help.

That day she mounted her horse and rode over to the docks. She went aboard the Commander and was greeted by Spike

"Well, well, hello, sister. Missing you."

"Spike," Kay whispered. "Don't say anything about the fishing trip until Ida has gone."

"No, thank you. I just came by for a moment. I'll stop by later."

Somehow, she felt nervous alone with Spike. She knew she liked him, but after the other night she felt less at ease with him. And, then, she didn't want to discuss her present business with him.

"Oh, don't rush right off," he said. "You're the best thing that's happened to this sow today. I'm getting a little fed up on the Campbell."

"Ida?"

"Yeah, Ida. Like I said the other night, it's high time Earl hauled you out of here. And I'll have him out in a day or so, too, if I get half a break."

"You will," she said dully. The significance of the situation struck her. If Spike Winch removed Harrow from the scene, what good

Couple Are Married At Bride's Home

Miss Helen Windram, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Windram, south of Salem, and Olin Muntz, of Salem, were united in marriage at her home at 11 a. m. Wednesday. The ceremony was performed by Rev. H. C. Brinhart, pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran church, Leetonia.

Miss Naomi Guy and Robert Crawford, both of Lisbon, were the attendants.

The bride was attired in a beautiful floor length aquamarine frock of crepe romaine and wore a lovely shoulder corsage of sweethearts.

Immediately following the wedding luncheon, which was attended by the bridal party and the immediate families and intimate friends of both the bride and groom, Mr. Muntz and his bride left for a motor trip along the lakes and at Cleveland.

For going away the bride was charming in a brown dress with harmonizing accessories and a green coat trimmed with beaver fur.

Mrs. Muntz is a graduate of Leetonia High school class of 1931 and the Salem Business college. For the last year, she has been employed at the office of the county farm bureau.

Mr. Muntz is a graduate of the Salem High school and is also employed at the county farm bureau office.

Upon their return from their wedding trip, they will make their home in Lisbon.

New Exterior Will Do Much To Make Old Home Look New

Provided the physical structure is still sound, the exterior of an old house frequently can be brought up to date at small cost.

Money for improvements of this kind can now be obtained from your local bank or other financial institution through the credit facilities made available by the National Housing Act.

Paint is the great restorer of exterior appearances. Some times, however, the exterior surface is either out-worn or out-dated, in which case a new surface is required.

There are many materials on the market which lend themselves to this use. New clapboarding, new shingles or waterproof composition board, are the most common methods of resurfacing.

The modern trend is toward simplicity of design. Removal of gingerbread ornaments or fancy trim will usually make a house look younger.

Property owners are urged to do needed work of this kind during Salem's Better Housing Program which is now under way.

Labor and material prices are such that they make improvements of this kind a good investment at the present time.

As business conditions improve, prices rise and investments in property modernization increase in value.

At a minimum cost the neglected house shown at the right was converted into the attractive, cozy looking home shown above. Many projects like this are now being undertaken as a part of Salem's better housing program.

Mrs. Calvin Leasure Is Hostess

Mrs. Calvin Leasure was hostess to members of the Queen Esther society of the Methodist Episcopal church last evening at her home on Madison ave. There were 10 members and one visitor present.

During the business session plans were made for a party to be held early in January.

Miss Geraldine Foding was in charge of the second chapter of the Year's study book.

Refreshments were served.

Miss Nellie Naragon will entertain the society at the next meeting Dec. 27 at her home on Woodland ave.

LITTLE CHOICE
ALL-AMERICAS
RIVAL FIRSTAll - Star Selections Of Smaller College
Teams Made(By Associated Press)
NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—The often-voiced plaint of the small college football fan has been that it's always the boys from the big schools—those who play before multitudes and have high-powered publicity departments to chronicle their feats—who win recognition when the time comes to pick the all-America team or other all-star aggregations.

But the big men from the small schools finally have won recognition in a little all-America team for 1934, picked with the aid of The Associated Press' observers in all parts of the country.

After comparing this team with the big all-America including the stars from Alabama, Minnesota, Stanford, Navy and the rest, the suggestion arises that a coach might pick the little team over the big one.

Turley Gets Birth

Good beyond question is the first team backfield of Johnny Mackrell of Davidson, Ike Peterson of Gonzaga, Fritz Hanson of N. Dakota State, and John Turley of Ohio Wesleyan.

No college was able to place more than one player on the first in its good years because into the big-time ranks, and undefeated tufts were able to break into the big-time ranks, and undefeated tufts were able to break into the second team as well as the first.

The south, the far west and the midwest each placed two men on the first eleven.
